GUEST ARTIST

KIKI PICASSO

Kiki Picasso (aka Christian Chapiron) is one of the finest french counterculture activists of modern art.

1974. The collective Bazooka was founded when a group of art students started collaborating on projects inspired by the UK punk scene. Influenced by Dadaism, neo-Dada, and underground comics, Bazooka is led by Kiki and Loulou Picasso, other collective members comprised Olivia Télé Clavel, Bananar and Lulu Larsen.

Very quickly they were experimenting as a group with putting out self-published zines, using the détournement technique to re-appropriate existing art, challenging aesthetic traditions and consumerist values through guerrilla design assaults on mass media.

And an us-against-the-world mentality was taking shape.

Kim Chapiron

Along with Romain Gavras, Kim Chapiron launched the collective Kourtrajmé in 1995 through which he directed numerous amazing underground short films starring the most influential bands coming from rap and electro culture or cinema.

After Sheitan, Kim's debut feature selected at the Toronto and Melbourne IFF in 2006, he returns to Tribeca and won the Jury Award with the ferocious Dog Pound in 2010. His latest feature Smart Ass confirms his natural way with young talent, and taste for in-your-face storytelling and imagery. In 2017, Kim came back with Oro, a TV series shot in Amazonia, telling the rise and fall of a young gold digger in the middle of the rain forest.

The first time we met Kiki Picasso, he talked about his son Kim and his photos from his trip in French Guiana. The selected one is a photo of a gold digger and member of the cast of Oro.

As his father, Kim was down to be part of a series for Antiz. Good family, good vibes.
